Thirty-six states in the U. S. A. have voted for prohibition repeal. The twenty-third amendment to the American constitution will be effective after December 8. After many years of experimenting with prohibition, it may be said the American citizen is now under Budweiser.

The board of trade was in a hurry to vote the money for the purchase of a ship in the music device to be installed at the skating rink. But the weather-man seems in a hurry to provide ice, and from present indications there is plenty of time to get the "music box" ready before the skating season opens.

The report of the Royal Commission on Banking in Canada came out last Monday. The commission favored establishment of a central bank, and the government is now expressing their disapproval to the surprise of nobody. The banking fraternity and some satisfaction in the commission's general approval of the present banking system, except for a few minor changes, and the lack of a central bank.

The banking commission recommended the abolishing of reserve for operating an account. This change has caused no little discontent among the bank's customers who still have the feeling that the charge is unfair.

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF LIFE AND ACCIDENT COMPANIES IN CANADA

MILK
The day when milk discovered that animals could be domesticated marked a new era for the human race. We do not know at this particular period the dairy industry arose, but we have a record that Abraham was "very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold." It is rather suggestive that his cattle were mentioned first, before the precious metals. The vigorous, progressive and successful races have been those which freely use milk and milk products. New Zealand is essentially a pastoral country, and the inhabitants of New Zealand enjoy, on the average, a longer span of life than do the people of any other country.

For the town and city dweller it was necessary to find a means whereby milk could be readily and safely transported from the farm to the city. This necessity brought about very radical changes in the dairy industry, with the result that today we have, in many cases, dairy herds which are free from disease. The milk thus comes from a healthy source and is produced in a cleanly manner. The milk is kept so cold that bacteria will not grow in it, and it is sent on to the city where it is pasteurized to make it safe, put into sterilized bottles, and delivered to the consumer.

The use of milk is a mark of civilization and an evidence of intelligence, for there are few facts as well established in theory and in practice as that the use of milk is conducive to health.

Milk contains a considerable variety of food elements, fat, sugar, protein, minerals, and vitamins. Yet it is a simple food in that it is readily digested, because in milk, these various food elements are present in a form which is easy for the body to use.

Milk cannot be replaced in the diet under ordinary conditions. There is, for example, no other way whereby the growing child can be given a sufficient amount of calcium (lime) to build strong teeth than the regular use of milk.

Milk is a most desirable food at all ages. Adults should use milk because its use is a simple and satisfactory means of securing a balanced diet, since milk supplies minerals and vitamins which must otherwise be lacking in the diet.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

ROOSEVELT HAS TEST FARM IN GEORGIA
Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 12.—A small red farmhouse with an unpromising brood of weathered out-buildings marks the location of a practical hobby with which President Roosevelt will occupy part of his vacation here this month.

His cattle or no from town up an unpaved road, the group forms the hub of 1,700 acres of hill land the ground required to show how a farm may be built up from a meagre start with meagre capital.

The Roosevelt farm, with 100 acres under cultivation, is a working farm where the objective is to make it pay its own way and show improvement. There's nesting equipment in the barnyard and cast-off implements at the fence corners, just a shanty are on the dairy side of the farm. President Roosevelt hopes solutions worked out on his place may help others.

The cattle here, now numbering around 150, was started on a hill stock, and with the use of purebred sire has been built up until it is now 75 per cent purebred. Crops on the farm are principally feed.

Little Betty, watching the farm hands spreading out a stack to dry, could contain her curiosity no longer so the poultry asked: "Is it really you're looking for?"

STILES, "The Druggist" The Rexall Store

BASSANO - ALBERTA

by B. M. Cower

The kid would have to be mighty certain it was Babe, though, before he would believe it. He was a stronger proof than that broken match had been. It made him shiver to think how close he had come to shooting Babe just on the strength of a broken match. Now, he didn't believe it—but he couldn't put it out of his mind, either, and the vague distrust hurt like physical pain.

"I don't want to let old lady Murray's cryin' worry yuh, Tiger Eye," Babe said abruptly, when they were pulling off their boots. "But not I create sympathy on a mister. They don't deserve no sympathy; man or woman, them's all tarred with the same stick. You're going to be valuable to the Poole, once you get out that sympathy of yours for mister women. You got to cut that out or yuh won't never see nowhere."

The kid did not answer, but presently Babe's breath fell into the slow rhythm of sleep.

The kid's mind farred back from deep dreaming and he opened eyes to see a yellow streak of "sunlight on the chain wall, high in a far corner belied the story by that he knew he had slept late. Usually they were ready to ride out along the rim when the sun showed above the mountains. Babe's side of the bed was empty, but there was no fast smell in the cabin and no crackling of fire in the stove. He looked after the horses, probably. Babe must have slept late himself. Must have been Babe, shutting the door that woke him.

The kid swung his feet to the floor and reached for his clothes. Babe would expect breakfast to be ready when he came back.

The kid started a fire in the stove, set a kettle of water on the fire, and washed his face and neck and ears in the tin basin on the bench. It showed another night. "I'm up to the stove, picked up the basin and pulled the door open, rinsing the water out upon the ground."

The basin jerked spitefully in his hand, a round hole through its upper side where the water spurted thru. From a clump of bushes over the kid's head, a bark of a rifle barked off the bullet. The kid let go the tin basin and dropped it, then fell forward on his face and lay there with his arms stretched out in front of him.

The kid's fingers stretched slowly to their slender length, relaxed a little, stretched again, moved this way and that, until they encountered something which they clamped so firmly the knuckles turned white.

Babe's foot. Babe, lying there on his face, within a few feet of the door, shot down while the kid lay dreaming. It wasn't the shutting of the door—it was the rifle shot that woke the kid. Babe, shot in front of his door, just as Nellie's old puppy had been shot. Even at that moment, while the kid was taking a firmer grip of that limp foot, he wondered if Babe was only getting back what he gave old Murray.

The kid squirmed backward, dragging Babe by his foot, slow. Back on his feet, and wait a minute. Babe sneezed at the third pull, and the kid's heart gave a hop, and then raced for joy. Babe was alive yet. Something to pull for now.

"I'm draggin' y'all in side the cabin, Babe," he murmured, in a low tone that would not carry beyond the woodpile.

Babe did not answer except with another groan, but he pressed one hand hard on the ground and pushed backward when the kid pulled again, so the kid knew Babe was under and understood all right. The kid hurried after that. He wanted his rifle inside the door soon as possible, and with a last wriggle he dragged Babe in, and shut the door shut.

Then he craned, picked Babe up in his arms and laid him on the bed. "Damn coyotes—got me when I stepped outside!" Babe gasped. "That's what a killah always aims at," the kid observed dryly. "Always aims to down a man at his own door."

Whether Babe caught the significance of that remark or not, he

"Kain't see any knuckles to bust. Babe," the kid said, looking at his hand. He pushed his rifle barrel thru the hole between two logs, but his yellow right eye was as unblinking as a tiger's when it looked down along the sights. He caught a glimpse of a grey hat crouched among the bushes beyond the spring. He didn't want to kill. Hat crouched, head, shoulders, back, the kid couldn't see the man he was aiming at, but he aimed where a shoulder should be and pulled the trigger. There was a sudden and violent agitation of the bushes and a man, and streaking it back toward his more discreet companions.

The kid's fingers bent again deliberately and the man's swinging right arm jerked upward below—the kid couldn't see the man he was aiming at, but he aimed where a shoulder should be and pulled the trigger. There was a sudden and violent agitation of the bushes and a man, and streaking it back toward his more discreet companions.

"Get anybody?"

The kid did not answer at once. "Taken that school outta one, Babe," he said in a low tone.

"J.K. kill 'im?"

"Reckon not. Shot his arm down, poise like he was."

"Shoot 't kill, yuh don't yuh?"

"Reckon he's high and gone to hell. When he turned, a strangled look upon his face, his eyes were glazed and his arms were wholly unlike Babe Garzer. "Damn that rascal and shoudn't yuh kill 'im? yuh want to—anybody that can whirr and bust knuckles the way yuh busted, Jess. Mark's can't get a bullet through a man's heart, if he wants to."

"Reckon I could, Babe."

"Well, damn it, do it, then! When yuh draw a bead on a nester, git 'im right. There ain't no come-back from a dead man. You set 'em out before yuh, Tiger Eye; any jany in the world won't make no self-defense. Yuh don't have to worry a damned bit. Now's your chance—git 'em, kid! Damn it, don't yuh know there's a bounty on that rascal? You can collect five hundred apiece for 'em, and no questions asked!"

"That the price on ole Pappy Murray, Babe?"

"Hell, it's the price on any damn nester! Didn't the Old Man tell yuh so?"

"Nevah did tell me that. Babe. Mistah taken my name and wheeah that rascal and shoudn't yuh kill 'im? yuh want to—anybody that can whirr and bust knuckles the way yuh busted, Jess. Mark's can't get a bullet through a man's heart, if he wants to."

WHEAT

Deliveries of Canadian Wheat from the 1st of August up to the 1st of November, 1932 million bushels of wheat were delivered to primary points in western Canada. While the original government estimate is 261 million for the current year, it is now generally conceded this is too high, and 260 million would be a closer figure. About 20 million bushels for seed and feed requirements and unmerchantable grain. It will be seen that the deliveries should total 190 million bushels, the 192 million delivered was less 70 per cent of the total deliveries with 12 million to be delivered. Last year in the same three months deliveries were 53 per cent of the total.

International Wheat Trade World shipments of wheat from August 1st to November 1st totalled 190,665,000 bushels. This is but 4 million bushels less than the total shipments for the same period last year. However, North America shipments were only 10 million bushels, which is 27 million less than last year.

United States Winter Wheat Estimate of winter wheat acreage is being looked forward to with a great deal of interest. Private estimators suggest that 39,000,000 acres have been seeded to winter wheat. This is only one and a half million acres less than the 1931-32 average. Weather conditions have not been propitious for the wheat plant, a far, being too dry in many localities.

Exports Canadian Wheat in October During the month of October world shipments of wheat from Canada totalled 2,300,000, compared with 40,000,000 bushels for the same month last year. Wheat exports in the form of flour for the month this year totalled over 2,300,000 bushels.

Another Estimate of Prairie Wheat Crop A wheat crop of 23,139,000 bushels in the three prairie provinces is the estimate for the year's production arrived at by the Northwest Grain Council. The National Wheat Board government estimate was 24,000,000.

European Wheat Acreage Likely to Decline European governments are preparing the ground for a reduction in wheat acreage, according to the United States Department of Agriculture (Foreign Crops & Markets). This publication believes that the high tide of European acreage under wheat has been passed, and a gradual decline will manifest itself from now onward.
